„The project has the mission to realise experiments regarding open school approach , to stimulate the innovation spirit and the involvement of students between 12-15 years old. We will plan and we will apply activities in all countries partners in this project. The activities will aim to develop the students'interest in innovation, in order to research to which extent the learning process promotes innovation.

The project will apply a methodology regarding the practical experiment so that we can answer the question: “How can we develop interest, abilities and innovation at students and teachers?” All the activities will work through the realities and chalanges of local society of their real life and they will use local community resources. Activities will be shared and debated with the students, because they will be the most important part and they will help creating all these activities. „We are proud to represent Romania in this project!” teacher Elena Cerasela Cremene –school manager, „Gheorghe Țițeica"Elementary School Craiova.

A really important dimension in promoting early interests, abilities and capacities in innovation is to allow students to familiarize themselves with authentic ways of work for the 21st century.

Without meetings it wouldn't be possible to establish a mixed, real experience and an impact evaluation because work at a local level can't replace the dynamic, intensity and challenges of a transnational team with teenagers from five different countries.
